GREAT BOXING CONTEST.

Middleweight Championship of the British Fleet in China.

Possibly owing to counter attractions there was not quite such a crowded house at the Theatre Royal on Saturday evening, to witness the great boxing contest for the middleweight championship of the British Fleet in China as might have been expected, Povertheless there was a very large attendance. Throu hout the duties of referee were in the capable bands of Mr Parker while Mr Glover acted as timekeeper.

contest between Willis of H. M. S. Astrasa and Garlie of H. M. S. King Alfred. Willie entered the ring at 10st 5lbs, and Garlie at 9st 12lbs. Four onnce gloves were used and the rounds were of two minutes' duration each. In the first two rounds each contestant occupied himself more or less in avoiding stray shots while the third round was productive of some hard hitting and on both side the exchanges were about equal. Sparring was he order in the next round while in the succeeding one, Willis appeared to have slightly the better of matters. Fighting, although having been kept up at a rattling pace, then became even more so and Garlie mas subjected to a good trunching and touched the floor four times. After the last occasion he rose and scored on his opponent both in the remainder of that round and the subsequent one. Again it seemed as if Garlie would become master of the situation, for Willis had to stand some very nasty blows, although they did not appear to have much sting be-hind them. Sparring ensued and in the barteenth bout it was thought that Willis had struck Garlio rather low down, but the referee ordered the fight to proceed.

Three times Garlic fell in the fourteenth round but always rose before time was called. Towards the end arlic was cut below the left eye but he pluckily continued, nevertheless it was apparent that he was feeling somewhat grogg. The fifteenth round opened as lively as ever but again Garlie twice touched the floor and taking the advice of his opponent Garlie gave up the struggle. Both men tought cleanly and the event was followed with the closest interest. Garlic expressed himself willing to meet Willis at a subse-

Ano her interesting ten round encounte was that stween Anderson of the Middle sex Regiment and O'Keift of the Torpedo Depot. Anderson was much the heavier man and was more nimble than O'Keift, who was called upon to defend himself during the first two rounds, although when he dd get a shot in it made itself felt. Anderson was very cool and in the following round opened strongly and both men took some hard knocks. O'Keift went down in the fourth round and soon after the next round opened he gave in to

1 lb less than his opponent. In the ed the winner to light within one month. An amusing extra turn was that provided by Stoker Emerick, of H. M. S. Hart entering the ring against Gardener in a three round exhibition when honours were divided, The whole contest was essentially a "Naval" battle and Mr. Whittaker, the romoter, wishes it to be known that in future these contests will be known as "Whittaker's buxing contests." The sport throughout the evening was well worth watching, all the rounds being conducted under the Marquis of Queensberry's rules which brought out the high qualities of British sport men in a remarkable degree. the utmost good feeling being displayed among the contestants:

DE STEIN'S EXPEDITION IN CENTRAL ASIA.

Further communications have been received at the Royal Geographical Society from Dr M. A. Stein, describing the results of his latest archæological and geographical investigations in Central Asia. They are dated Khotan, July 15, 1908. Early in December, 1902, Dr Stein, travelling from Turfan, had reached Karashahr, in the extreme northeast of the arche-logical explorations of the winter. Plain, now mainly a waste covered with scrub and low jungle, which encircles the importance which the territory on ancient Yon-k'i had possessed in pre-Mahomedan times. But the vicinity of subsoil water, often impregnated with salts, and the effects of a climate evidently less dry thanin other parts of the great Turkestan depression, had completely destroyed whatever structures might have once stood within the still extant clay ramparts. Chinese coins, picked up on the spot, made it possible to determine that these sites had been occupied down to the ninth century A.D. A far hetter field for systematic excavations was offered by an extensive collection of ruined Buddhist shrines. locally known as Ming-oi ("the thousand houses.") which occupies some low rock terraces at the easternmost foot of the range overlooking the Karashahr river from the south. Situated within easy reach of the high road leading from Karashahr to Korla, the ruins had repeatedly been visited by European travellers, including Dr Hedin and within the last few years Professor Grunwedel's archaeological expedition, on its passage to and from Turfan, had offected excavations in some of the structures less buried under debris, The disposition of the ruins in long rows of detached cellas, varying in size, but all showing close resemblance in plan and construction, facilitated the employment of a large number of labourers. The first diggings showed that apart from the destructive effects of rain and snow, the temples had suffered much damage by a great conflagration which, in view of coin finds reaching down to the ninth cantury A.D., may safely be connected with the earliest Mahomedan invasions. But in spite of all the destruction caused by iconoclastic zeal and atmospheric influences, there remained plentiful archieo logical spoil: A great mass of excellent the temple walls, emerged from the deep layers of debris filling the interior of the larger shrines; from vaulted passages enclosing some_cellus were recovered some fine fresco panels which a timely burist had saved both from fire and moisture. Finds of painted panels and delicately carved relieves in wood, once richly gilt, bore proof of lavish adornment with votive gifts which these shrines had once enjoyed. Consider-ing the relatively late date down to which Australia & China, and the Russo-Chinese this sacred place had been occupied, the artistic excellence of many relievos, etc., was all the more striking. Notwithstandng some manifest difference of styles these sculptures and paintings yet display-ed quite as clearly as the work of ancient Khotan, the predominant influence of Greco-Buddlist models from the extreme north-west of India. The manuscript remains recovered were either in Indian script or in Uighur. Considering the great number of temples, the total absence of ruins which could with certain y be recognised as monastic dwellings was a curious feature of this site. But if the living seemed to have been averse from taking up their abode with the gods, it was otherwise with the dead, for cinerary urns and boxes were uncarthed in numbers around some of the abrine and stupus. Dr Stein could not trace in the vicinity any remains pointing to early occupation by villages. Yet the wide plain stretching eastwards, a desolate waste of scrub and sand, could even now be easily brought under irrigation by canals from the Kara-shahr river. Whatever changes desiccation may have effected in this region, it seems certain that the supply of water new available in the Karashahr river far exceeds the needs of the parrow strip of land actually cultivated, chiefly by colonies of sion of cultivited area. After the completion of their tasks by Christmas, it was a relief to the party to move up to the cold sunny hills of Khora, two marches from Ming-oi whore information, elicited with much trouble from Korla shepherds and reticent Mongols, had led to the discovery of Buddhist remains hitherto unnoticed. Surveyor Rai Lal Singh had rejoined Dr Stein at Ming-oi, after making his way from Turfan towards 764 Korla, largely through previously unmap ped portions of the Kurnk-tagh ranges The visit to the Khora ruins gave Rai Lal Singh an opportunity for useful surveys on the range dividing the Karashahr valley from the open plain of the Tarim basin. After a visit to the Inchike (or hahyar) river, the party marched over hitherto unsurveyed ground to Kuchar, Rai LalSingh following the course of that river through its deboucment from the mountains, while waterless desert to the north-west. After a week's halt at the easis of Kuchar, which was utilised for visits to the ruins and a rapid study of their specially instructive

Catalogues German, English and | January to resume his journey to the south Inquiries set on foot by Dr Stein since leaving the Khotan and Keriya region in the autumn of 1906 had resulted in information reaching him about sever-1 remation reaching him about sever i remained sites in the Taklamakan which had remained unexplored so ar; and he was anxious to visit them before the heat and the season of sandstorms made work on that ground impossible. On Jaunary 29 the party left the last shephered huts in the Tarim jungle, and after a trying tramp of eight days across high dunes they reached the northern edge of the dried in delta, which the Keriya river dried-up delta, which the Keriya river had formed at some early period. There was nothing here to indicate the right channel in the maze of dry riverbeds, all half buried by drift sand and often disappearing completely amidst jungle, dead since long ages. The river had formed a

Stein at last sighted, from a huge ridge of and, the glittering ice-sheet in the distance Is took severa days more before they arrived at living forest, and found the river branching off from the old one, close to the northern—most point Dr Stein had by the Keriya Darya, Dr. Stein resumed rehaeological lab are at the Kara-done sit, which he had vis ted on his previous ourney, a d which the river, by its latest thating, has approach dagain after long contacts. Having been joined on the Keriya river by a party of his old "trea-sure-se king" guides from Khotan, Dr. Stein marched with them by a new route to the desert edge north of the easis of Domoke. Here excavations were rewarded by valuable finds in the shape of wellpreserved manuscripts in Indian scripts, Buddhist paintings on wood, &c.

March and the early part of April were tus spent in archaeological labours along he desert belt adjoining the easis from Domoko to Khotan. Amongst the ruins newly traced there Dr Stein mentions the cemains of a large Buddhist temple, deorated with elaborate frescues, now comletely buried by high dunes in the desert-trip between the Yurung-kash and the Karakash rivers. Like the large Rawak Vehara which Dr Stein discovered in 1901 in a closely corresponding position not far from the opposite bank of the Yurung-kash, this temple proved to be one to the early centuries of our era. Unfortunately subsuit moisture had weakened the walls to such an extent that continued excavation threatened to esult in complete destruction. After having been rejoined by Rui Lal Single who had in the meantime completed a detailed survey of previously unumposit ground-in the north-west and north of the Kholan oasis, the party set out by the desert route which leads toward Aksu along the Khotan river-bed, then practisix marches below the casis. Stein discovered the ruins of a fortified watch station once guarding the river route. The fort had been destroyed by fire, but on the steep rock slope below big masses of refuse, thrown out by its occupants in the course of long years had fortunately remained in excellent preservation, safe from moisture and driving sand, From this unsavoury quarry Dr Stein recovered a great collection of documents on wood and paper, in a variety of scripts, mainly Indian, Chinese, and Tibetan, and none app antly later than the eighth an ninth centuries A.D. The great mass the recor's evidently belongs to the parie of Tibetan invasions, and closely con esponds in appearance and character cally dry throughout. On the curious lesert hill of Mazar-tagh, which flanks

the Khotan river on the west, some the records brought to light by Dr Stei just year from the rained fort of Miran month of Lon-nor. By the beginning of May the expeditio reached Aksu, having suffered a good deon the way from the heat of the desert and sundstorms. At Asku Dr Stein was abl to arrange through the help of his old man darin friend, Pun Darin, now Taotai, fo the local help which Rai Lai Singh needs for the continuous survey he was to carr along the outer Tian-shan range westward as far as the passes above Kashgar. Stein himself travelled up the Uch-Purfa-As supplied to the principal valley, and thence murched by a route no shown by published maps across a barrer but remarkably picture-que mountain rang to the casis of Kelpin. In spite of peak rising to 12,000 to 13,000 feet, water is now very scanty throughout these mountains.

The way in which obvious desication has affected the conditions of Kirghiz herdsmer razing in the valleys, and the surviva among them of local lore unmistakably o pre-Mahamedan origin, offered interastiv objects of study. Information opportunely secured through "treasure-seekers" o Kelpiu led to the discovery of extensive debris areas marking ancient settlement in the desert belt between the arid oute chine have just been thoroughly hills of Kelpiu and the lowest course of cleaned and overhaused, and is in Good the Kashgar river. Far-advanced erosion was secured to prove that this truct, once traversed by the ancient Chinese high road to Kashgar, had been occupied down to the eighth century A. D. by large settlements to which canals still traccable in parts carried water from the Kashgar river. There was opportunity here also for interesting topographical work, as Dr Stein's survey revealed a series of low parallel rauges, which continue to the north-west the line of the curious rugged hills about A rapid journey vin Yarkand brought Tumshuck and Marlbashi shown by the extant maps as isolated rock islands. Dr Stein by the middle of June back to Khotan. The arrangement and packing of his archeological collections accumulated during two years' labour, are bound to prove an exalting task, seeing-how ex-tensive they are and how much care is needed to prevent damage to often fragile antiques on the long and difficult transit to India. Thus he expected to be kept hard at work in Khotan until the close of

After completing his task at Khotan Dr. Stein honed to carry out, with Rai La Singh, explorations in those parts of the high Kwenlun range about the Yurungkash and Karakash sources which still remain to be surveyed. Then, late in September, Dr Stein hoped to be able to start on the return journey to India over the passes of the Karakorum, and may be expected in England in December.

AMERICAN FLEET AT AMOY.

(From Our Own Correspondent).

Anoy, November 5. TUESDAY'S PROGRAMME.

The boat races were held this morning, and were won by U.S.S. Lousiana. The cutter of the Flagship is considered to be about the best in the whole Fleet, and the men have won numerous trophies. One of the many things the Lousiana excels in is boat racing. At twelve noon all tho eight Battleships, and the Chinese Cruisers fired salutes in honour of the Empress-Dowager's Birthday. The men-of-war were all decked with flags. The sports and gymkhana were held in the afternoon, and some fine running and jumping was wit nessed. In the 100 yards two men from each battleship rau, the winners being two officers, who finished within six inches of each other. The long jump was well patronised, the winner jumping nearly 20 feet. About half a dozen mon entered for the high jump, and the winner managed to olear 5ft. 6ins. The pig sticking caused great amusoment, the competitors being dressed up in comic costumes, provided by the authorities. In the evening, dinner was held in the large Reception Hall to specially invited guests of Lieut Haughton made a splendid total of 72 the foreign community, to the Chibese and was followed by Lt. R. Home with officials and to the officers and Commanders of the Fleet. The Hall was a blaze of highest scorer with 35. colour, and the sight was a fine one. It is Imperial Highness Prince Lang proposed the health of Empress-Dowager, the President of the United States, and not re assembled guests, and the teasts were heartily responded to. During dinner i Divisional Band from the Fleet rendered Some beautiful music. At 9.30 the Grand Display of Fireworks took place, and were quite a success. An unfortunate thing happened soon after 12, a rocket fell on in the roof of the Y.M.C.A. tent, and set it on fire. In a very short time the whole building was ablaze. By stremmus efforts all the furniture was safely got outside, together with the piano, and the Post Office safe. A large number of Chinese soldiers were present, and managed to put the fire out, but not before the building was completely gutted. Some 100,000 cigarettes, and about half the number of cigars were lost, but fortunately nothing much else of value. Much sympathy was felt for Mr. Beard, who had made the Y.M.C.A. tent one of the features of the place. Another tent was borrowed, and quickly fittted up, and was patronised

THE LIST DAY OF THE VISIT, in the morning, the final football game was played off between the Lousingand the Virginia team. After a stronuous, and hard fought game, the Lousiana had to submit to defeat by 11 points. LONDON LETTER.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) LORDON, October 8.

But the greatest discussion is being evoked by the International Tuberculosis Congress in Washington. All nations are well represented, but the outstanding feature is the downthrow of Dr Koch's contention that bovine tuberculosis is not transmissible to human beings. Dr Detre of Buda Pesth has evolved a method whereby by the injection of serum it can be told what form of tuberculosis the original affection of the patient was: It is not altogether a satisfactory test, but it has clearly been demonstrated that certain patients have well developed tuberculosis of the bovine variety. Moreover there are many doctors who, like Dr Arthur Newsholme of England, point to the number of babies with incipient tuberculosis of the bovine kind derived from milk. The Congress has not voted against Dr Kock's contention but the feeling it against it all

In Egypt the newly formed Independent Egyptian Party is running a vigorous propaganda in favour of the freedom of the DERARI M. demonstrations attended by over five thousand people at a time have been held at 4 Cairo and elsewhere and considerable enthusiasm is being shown. There is a misconception abroad that the Egyptians want to resume a sort of provincial relation to the refermed Turkey. The real fact is that the Party aims at freedom from the suzerainty of Turkey, as much as from British occupation. The British government is being sounded as to its readiness to recognise the national sentiment in Egypt and the session just opening will probably draw some statement from : Edward Grey.

A few months ago the Act legalising the cultivation of tobacco in Scotland came into force. Since then the experiments make have been very satisfactory and now Mr Purves Clay of Kalemouth, Roxburghshire, and others have healthy crops of "the weed" on their land. It is not the first time Scotland has grown tobacco for during the American War of Independence many thousands of arable land north of the border b'ossomed with the tobacco flower, the idea being to supply the tobacco while the war was on and there was a stoppage of the Virginian variety. Tobaccó is already being grown in Ireland but I am assured it takes a good deal of patriotism to make it acceptable as a palatable smoke.

The turn of affairs in the Balkans is too subject to variations for me to venture on any definite comments. I may however say that the sudden declaration of isdependence by Bulgaria and the determination of Austria to positively take over agreeable feeling here, for it was considered that these countries had chosen the worst possible moment for the young Tuckish régime. Doubtless that is a mat-ter of the point of view: Bulgaria and Austria regard the m ment as complotely auspicious. But the fact remains that England put great hopes on a reformed Turkey and is most anxious that the Treaty of Berlin should be respected. The Teutophobes see in the move the evil hand of Germany, but I fancy that remains to be proved. True, the change of events in Turkey has made England the paramount influence in place of Germany, and the Kaiser may be ready to back the reactionaries and work against the Constitution, but that is not clear as vet.

Meanwhile, unless Italy takes a hand in stiring strife in Herzegovina and some irresponsible Bulgarian frontier party precipitates a struggle by crossing the Turkish frontier, it is not unlikely that diplomacy will smooth matters out, despite the fact that Turkey would like to regain Eastern Rumelia I am sure that Bulgaria would be keenest on fighting, for she has her army at a better pitch than over before. But Europe is against the outbreak and

A meeting of Old Etonians, held at the town house of the Marquis of Salisbury, has decided to form an Eton Society for China, with a students' hostel at Chentu. as a basis for further efforts. compiled at the Nautical Almanac Office n. London from the result of the analysis of observations taken by means of an aucomatic tide-recording machine in the Water Police Basin at Taim Sha Tsul durin the years 1887-8-9. The zero of the table corresponds with the zero of the soundings in the Admiralty
